

Cyber Liability & Data Breach Coverage

Get coverage that really covers.

The chance of an organization experiencing a data breach has increased by 31% in the past five years. This is a wake-up call for businesses—a breach can damage customer trust and hurt the bottom line. If a breach does occur, our Cyber Liability and Data Breach coverage can help keep your business protected.

What we offer:

First-Party Privacy Breach Expense

Pays your costs for notifications, monitoring, investigations, and crisis management expenses. Includes coverage for Extortion Threat Expenses as well as Data Replacement and System Restoration Expenses up to $10,000.

Third-Party Cyber Liability Coverage

Pays your liability to others due to a data breach within your business, including PCI Fines up to $10,000.

Regulatory Proceeding Claim Expense

Pays fines and penalties assessed against you as a result of investigations into a potential data breach or violation of privacy laws.

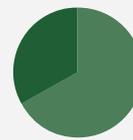

First-Party Business Interruption

This coverage is optional and added for an additional premium. It pays your business income loss and extra expenses sustained during the reconstruction period due to a cyber or data breach liability loss.

Thoughtful coverage is the best protection.

Prevent data breach and protect your business.

Even if you are covered, a security breach can mean lost time, money, and sensitive information. It's important to safeguard your customers' data and keep your systems as secure as possible.

Secure your digital files.

Restrict access to your office Wi-Fi, avoid using company devices on public networks, set up firewalls, install antivirus and anti-spyware applications, and properly dispose of technology tools.

Secure your office.

Lock up paper files, get rid of information you don't need, screen employees and have guests sign in, and establish other routines that prioritize data protection.

Protect your company.

Get informed, train employees, control access, and stay vigilant. Finally, check with your agent to make sure your coverage is adequate for the kinds of data your company handles.

Thoughtful is how we do things.

For us, thoughtful is more than a word—it's the foundation of everything we do. We consider every detail, plan ahead, look out for each other, and do what's right. We're making good things happen, so we can make our members' lives a little bit easier.

Mutual means we're all in it together.

As a mutual, we aren't owned by stockholders, so we're able to put our members first. We take the time to get to know them and their needs in order to offer coverage that really covers. Because looking out for friends and neighbors means we all enjoy mutual strength and prosperity.
